

Millville officials should set the record straight

October 29, 2010

What doesn't the city of Millville want us to know?

On Oct. 1, the city of Millville filed a "motion to quash" in an attempt to block the commissioners' appearance/participation at TrackRacket's depositions. Depositions are fact-finding interviews conducted between TR's lawyers and people of interest to the case. These interviews are held in a controlled environment with the parties' counsel present. All the transcripts become public record.

This motion to quash is nothing but the commissioners trying to absolve themselves of the mess they made by bringing a known noise polluter to our backyards without requiring protection from the noise and sneak out of being held accountable.

It is another slap in the face to the people of Millville, as the commissioners would rather spend taxpayers' money to pay for a lawyer to fight citizens rather than do their jobs and support residents.

All the sitting commissioners who voted to bring the New Jersey Motorsports Park to our doorstep have fallen over themselves to declare their support for the NJMP. If this private business was so critical to our community, then why are they dodging the very citizens they have been elected to protect?

If they have nothing to hide, then they should be happy to set the record straight.
